Boys Who Run Around at Night. So you want to run out o' nights. eh? Well, my boy, if there is one single habit more than another calsingle habit more than another car-culated to bring a lad to evil ways it is that of running around a village, town or city o' nights. All the bad in a human nature begins to bubble as soon as the the sun goes down. You wouldn't dream of doing a mean as soon as the the sun goes down. You wouldn't dream of doing a mean act to your neighbors by daylight, but after dark it seems a good joke to lug off a gate, upset outhouses, steal fruit, or raise a false alarm of fire. Find a murderer, burglar, or thief—point out to me the biggest loafer in your town—and I will show you a man who begins his career by running around at night. Don't I want a boy to have fun? You bet I do! But this grabbing your hat after supper and sneaking over the back fence is a mean piece of business when you come to figure it up. Down on the corner you meet Jim this or Tom that. You go "over to town" and are seen hanging around this or that place. You may sneak into a saloon and see a game of billiards, but you hate yourself for it. You may sit at Smith's grocery store and hear a lot of old bald-headed liars spin their yarns and abuse religion. But you go out feeling that you could kick yourself. You'd go home and go to bed if it wasn't for Jim or Tom. He wants a little "fun" and he drags you into it. What he calls fun is stringing a rope across the sidewalk. It doesn't occur to him that some person may break a limb or be killed. He thinks it a cute thing to roll.

person may break a limb or be kill-ed. He thinks it a cute thing to roll off barrels of salt, set an old shed on fire or stop up the chimney of a wid-ow's house. What can you do at night if you remain at home? Scores of things, my boy. Suppose you learn how to draw or paint? Look at a watch and you will see that all the wheels, springs, etc., go to make up a perfect time piece. Just so with a man. There are lots of one-wheeled men in the world. They can sell
